Connie: I will do my best to help the girl.
Oracle: I know you'll do a good job; you always do. This time, no magic—I'm taking away your angel powers.
Connie: Can I still talk to a child?
Oracle: Yes, you can. Only the little girl will be able to see you; no one else. Do I make myself clear?
Connie: Absolutely.

Oracle: Here is your assignment—don’t mess it up or lose the right to come back down to earth again.
Connie: what is the assignment?
I hear, geez, you make one little mistake, and they never let you forget it.
Oracle: I'll pretend I didn't hear that.
Alright, assignment time—help a little girl make one friend. I expect you to do a good job, Connie.

Connie: I'll do my very best and make you proud. What is the child's name?
Oracle: Penny lives in a tiny town, and it’s time for me to send you to her house.
arrives at Penny's house and observes its poor condition.

Connie: This place is barely holding together. I need to help her find a better home and a new friend as well.

A school bus pulls up, and Penny steps off, heading inside where she notices a cute kitty.
Penny: Here, kitty kitty!
Connie purrs and meows.
Mom: When you come inside, start your homework.
penny: Can Kitty come inside too while I do my homework?
Mom: What kitty? I don't see any kitty.

penny: Coming, Mom. My mind is playing tricks on me.

Connie follows Penny into her bedroom and then reappears, making herself visible for Penny to see.

Connie: Well, hello there, Penny! I’m Connie, your angel cat, here to guide you.

Penny: Wait, you can talk? Hi Connie, why can't Mom see you? Is it just me who can?

Connie: I'm only here to help you, dear, which is why only you can see me. And yes, I talk just like you do because my collar makes me talk—God gave it to me.
Penny: Wow, that's amazing! I should get started on my homework.
She worked on her homework for an hour, and now it's done and out of the way.
Connie: Do you believe in God, Penny?
Penny: I sure do believe God does amazing things to help people in need.

Connie: I come from heaven, sent by the chief angel cat to help you conquer your shyness.
Penny: alright!
Connie: I have helped you make a friend, and now I must be on my way.
Penny: I get it.
Mom: time for dinner dear then watch tv then off bed with you.
Penny: On my way and understood.

Penny ate dinner and watch tv she now off to bed
Mom: lights out did you say bedtime prayers
Penny: I'm doing it now, and Connie will join me in saying prayers.
Connie: Certainly.
They said their bedtime prayer together, and with Penny now fast asleep, Connie decides to head to bed as well.

The morning arrived.

Mom: Time to get up and get ready for school. I'll prepare breakfast, so hurry up or you'll be late.
Penny: Okay, Mom, I'm up, getting ready now, and I'll hurry.
Connie: Let me see, I do believe you’re ready to go to school.
Penny: Thank you, Connie!
And Penny is now at the breakfast table, eating her breakfast.

Mom: Hurry up! You don’t want to miss the bus—it’s a 20-mile walk if you do!
Penny: I'm done, I'm out, and she rinses off her bowl, spoon, and cup, then puts them in the dishwasher instead of leaving them in the sink.
Connie: Good girl, let's go. You don't want to be late.
Penny: I'm hurrying.
Penny makes it to the bus stop on time.

Connie isn't allowed to go to school; her oracle made it quite clear she's too invisible to get on the bus.

Connie: What's the big idea, Oracle? Why can't I go to school with Penny?

Oracle: Besides you, there's too much distraction, and she doesn't pay attention in class when you're there.

Connie: Oh yeah, I forgot—by the way, Oracle, where's Penny's dad?

Oracle: He died when Penny was very young.
Connie: I became her stepdad to a daughter who is an only child, so Penny would never feel lonely again. Oh, and they live in a nice house too.
Oracle: Sounds like it's all figured out, but one problem remains—how do you get mom to fall in love with the man you have in mind?
Connie: I will pray to God about it after I find Him.

Oracle: wonderful idea god always has a way making your plans workout.
Connie: I know God is wonderful, and I am happy to do work for my Lord and Savior.
Oracle: Me too, he's a great boss to work for.
Connie: If I can't go to school, how can I help her make a friend?
Oracle: Trust me, when the time is right, you won't need school to find her friend.
Connie: God, guide me to the right time.

Oracle: I have to go now. You should start searching; a man needs a wife.
Connie: Wait, a cat angel assigned to his daughter?
Oracle: Let me take a moment to check... nope.
Connie: Thank you, bye Oracle.
Oracle: I will check up on you, so behave.
Connie: I'll be on my best behavior.
Oracle: Bye for now, and remember to follow God's guidance.

Connie: Will do, I'm off to look for him now.

Oracle Left with Connie, out searching for a sign, watching a man in need, Penny's mom, and Penny.

Connie goes to Penny's school and sees a man picking up his daughter. Sure enough, no one else is there, so she leaves and greets Penny at the bus stop.

The bus pulls up, and Penny steps out.

Penny: Connie, you waited for me. You're such a good kitty.
Connie: Thank you! You go ahead inside, I've got something to do real quick. I'll join you in a second.
Penny: Okay, I'll see you inside.
Connie hears a man say, "You need a mother who can do things for you that I can't, and I'm sorry I didn't give you a sibling to play with."

Minnie: It's okay, Daddy. I understand. You do a great job with me.
Man: Thank you, Minnie. I love you for saying that. Someday, I hope to remarry a lady who has a daughter you can play with in my big, empty house.
Minnie: I love that! I'll pray to God for it.
Connie also prayed to God that they would somehow bump into each other and instantly fall in love.

One day, a mom was walking around town when she accidentally dropped her wallet, and a man noticed it.

Man: Is this yours? I think you dropped it.

Mom: Yes, I did, thank you! I've never seen you around before; you must be new in town.

Man: It's just me and my daughter in the big house I bought, and I promised her a mom and a sister. She told me to pray to God about it.

Mom: It's a small world; I'm a mom to one daughter and not married.
Man: Really what are odds run into you
Mom: I know what happened to your wife, if you don't mind me asking.
Man: My wife passed away, and my daughter is very young. Yours.
Mom: My husband passed away, and my daughter is very young. She feels terribly lonely and tells me she wants a sister of her own.

Man: My daughter feels very lonely and wishes for a sister to play with in the giant house I have.
Mom: What's your daughter's name?
Man: Minnie and yours.
Mom: Penny, wow, their names are a perfect match!
Man: I think it's time for the kids to meet.
Mom: Agreed! Let's do this.
Man: Tomorrow after school.
Mom: Deal!

Mom: There's a man coming over after school to see you. He has a daughter around your age named Minnie.
Connie: Thank you, God, for arranging this meeting so cleverly!
Penny: I look forward to meeting Minnie.
Connie: good girl!
Meanwhile, over at the man's house.

Man: i meet lady has daughter your age name penny you going to meet her after school at her house she only child to being raised mom without dad
Minnie: My prayer has been answered! Yes, I can’t wait to meet Penny.
The big day arrived, and Minnie was getting ready for Penny.
Man: You ready to go to their house?
Minnie: Yes, I'm ready.

Mom: They'll be here any minute. Are you ready, Penny?
Penny: I'm ready.
Connie went to a quiet spot called Oracle.
Connie: Oracle, could you please make it so Minnie can see me as well? Thank you.
Oracle: Sure, why not?
Connie: Thank you, I feel like I need help with both girls..
Oracle: I get why.

The Oracle is gone, and they hear the doorbell.
Mom opens the door
Man: Hi there, do you remember me?
Mom: Of course, I do!
Man: Minnie, this is Penny.
Mom: Penny meets Minnie.
"Come on in already, Penny," she says, taking their coats and putting them in the hallway closet.
Penny: Okay, Mom, I will.

Penny: Do you want to check out my room?
Minnie: Sure, let's go!
They go upstairs to Penny's room, where Connie is waiting for both of them.
Connie: Penny Introduce me your new friend?
Penny: This is Minnie, my new friend.
Minnie: Penny, what’s the name of your talking cat?
Penny: Connie is an angel kitty sent from heaven.

Connie: Hello Minnie, I was outside your house a couple of days ago and thought you would be perfect for Penny.
Minnie: Well, thank you, Minnie!
Penny: How come she saw you, Connie?
Connie: I ask Oracle to reveal itself to Minnie. Oh, and Minnie, I prayed that you and Penny would meet, become sisters, and best friends too.
Minnie: Same here, I admit it.

The girls got along great, and the man hit it off with the mom and dad, eventually proposing to the mom.

Oracle: your time up Connie time you return back to heaven other kids are waiting for you help them.
Connie: Can't say goodbye to both girls, watch both parents exchange vows, and then leave?
Oracle: When's the wedding?
Connie: Tomorrow afternoon.

Oracle: I suppose it's okay! After they say "I do," I must leave at once—no ifs, ands, or buts.
Connie: I give you my word.
the big day came
Minnie: I am so excited! In just a few minutes, you'll be my sister. I can't wait!
Penny: my thoughts exactly.
They went to the courthouse to get married since they didn’t have any family living in town.

Connie: Girls, when the parents say "I do," I must leave immediately, so I'm saying my goodbyes now before the wedding.
Girls: Goodbye, Connie. We'll miss you so much, and I hope you come visit us soon!
Connie: Goodbye, girls, someday I will return. And the parents said, "I do."
Connie had gone back to heaven.
The end.
